FOOD for THOUGHT:

Nine-year-old Adam Bhana has learned that being honest pays off. When he was leaving a soccer game, he found some money on the ground. He asked around to see who it might belong to, but no one claimed it. Adam didn't think it would be honest to keep it since it wasn't his, so he decided to send the money to his favorite soccer player who had just had a great game. The player, midfielder Adam Mooy, was so touched by the boy's generosity and impressed with his honesty, that he offered to meet young Adam.

No one would have known if Adam had kept the money, so why did it matter that he was honest? What do you think you would do if you found money like Adam? (Be honest! 😊) Why is it important to be honest even if no one would know otherwise?
