WEEK 3

MEMORY VERSE | Proverbs 10:9

HONESTY GAME:

Play a mealtime version of “two truths and a lie.” Take turns going around sharing three of your favorite foods. Two of the three should actually be your favorite; one should be something you don’t really like. Go around the table and allow everyone a chance to guess which of the three is a lie. The winner is the person who guesses the most correctly, and their prize is getting to have one of their favorite foods sometime later in the week. After you finish playing, talk about how it felt to try to trick each other, and why you wouldn’t want to do that in “real life.”

Just for FUN!

President Abraham Lincoln was known for being honest, so he earned the nickname, Honest Abe. Give each other nicknames based on positive characteristics you see in each other.
